Objectives

Section Title

As a part of 3.0 Offer Simplification, there are opportunities to provide additional guidelines around certain offer-related or adjacent nomenclature to improve clarity, increase consistent terminology use and reduce redundancy.

The current opportunities are for these terms:

- Eligible
- Qualifying
- Select
- Premium
- Bill, bill credit
- Statement, statement credit

Internally, the end goal is to include vetted and finalized recommendations as part of 3.0 content guidelines to further streamline the content creation process.

Eligible, qualifying:

- Financial use vs. current use
- General use

Eligible and Qualifying: Financial use*

Meaning of “Eligible”

- Able to opt in or apply for a service or offer

Meaning of “Qualifying”

- Triggers a specific level of benefit

Examples

- You can be eligible to apply for a monthly payment plan, but you might not qualify to pay $0 down. You might get only $500 worth of total financing vs. the max of $1,500.
- Your phone might be eligible to trade in, but you might qualify for less than the maximum trade-in offer amount.
- You can be eligible to apply for the VZ Visa card, but you might not qualify for the lowest interest rate.
- You purchase items eligible for a BMSM offer, but because its cost isn't the max price allowed, you don't qualify for the maximum amount of savings.

Payment options

36 monthly payments

Monthly payments shown are for customers who qualify to pay $0 Down, $30.55/mo. for 36 months; 0% APR. Retail Price: $1099.99

3G devices
4G non-Global System for Mobile devices
Connected Devices (including watches)

Eligible and Qualifying: General use - current

Lack of consistency

- "Eligible" used interchangeably with "Qualifying"

Redundancy

- Frequently repeated in subheads, body content and T&Cs

Step 1

See if you qualify for the Affordable Connectivity
Program (ACP).

If you qualify for ACP, you'll automatically qualify for our Verizon Forward Program.

Eligible and Qualifying: General use - proposed

General

- Try to align meaning as closely as possible to financial definitions to decide whether to use “eligible” or “qualifying.”
 - If there’s no connection to either definition, use “eligible.”
- Try to write content in a way that uses “eligible” and/or “qualifying” no more than once each per header, subhead and paragraph.

Verizon Up

- Don’t use “qualifying” in the context of Verizon Up. In general, all Verizon wireless customers have an opportunity to claim VZ Up benefits.
 - Don’t say: “Do I qualify for Verizon Up?”
 - Do say: “Am I eligible for Verizon Up?”

Verizon Up members

- Don’t use “eligible” in direct relation to speaking about VZ Up members. All initially have the same opportunity to claim the same benefits. Therefore, all are inherently eligible.
 - Don’t say: “Eligible Verizon Up members”
 - Do say: “You’re eligible as long as you meet these requirements”

Example use case: Align with financial definitions, reduce redundancy

- ACP is a gov't internet subsidy for anyone who meets criteria. Verizon Forward Program requires certain Verizon internet plans, therefore customer might not automatically qualify. But they are eligible if they enroll in LTE Home, 5G Home, or Fios Mix & Match plans.
- Header: Sensory verb also removed (ableist)

Example use case: Avoid back-to-back redundancy

Visit phoneclaim.com/verizon to check current device eligibility. This will be determined at time of insurance claim approval.

Smartphones that only have a cracked front screen are eligible, damage beyond a front cracked screen is not eligible for cracked screen repair. Available in select locations, which are subject to change at any time. Availability of same-day repair depends on criteria such as claim approval time, technician availability, and subject to parts availability. Repairs are performed by an Asurion-certified technician and come with a 12-month warranty. Visit phoneclaim.com/verizon to check current device eligibility. Eligibility determined at time of insurance claim approval. This benefit is provided by Wireless Phone Protection.

Antonyms

- Ineligible
- “Doesn’t qualify” or “non-qualifying” depending on tone and context

What happens to my 2 TB Cloud Storage if I move to a non-qualifying plan? ^

If you switch from Welcome Unlimited, Unlimited Welcome or Unlimited Plus phone plans to a non-qualifying plan, you will lose your perk discount and will be billed $14.99/mo for Verizon Cloud 2 TB until canceled. Cancel anytime through My Verizon Online or the My Verizon App.

Select: Current and proposed general use

Select: General use - current

Potential lack of clarity

- Potential for both verb and adjective use to be confused in close proximity

A free 5G phone.
For all our customers.
To show the love.

Select Device

Select: General use - proposed

General

- Top-of-funnel eligibility limits: “Select” (adjective) is the preferred way to say “certain” or “particular”
 - Use in place of listing every SKU, plan, etc.
 - Can be used for higher-tiered or lower-tiered products and services
 - Ex. a BMSM offer limited to select SKUs
 - Note: For stand-alone use cases (ex. a stand-alone watch plan), use the name of the product or service instead of “select.”
- Use as a verb in a button or text link label, or in title or body copy when referencing a CTA (e.g. if you click a button that says “Select device”, the next page might have language confirming that action e.g. “You selected x device.”)
 - Exception: Avoid using “select” within inline text links in close proximity to “select” adjective use to avoid confusion. Adjective use takes priority.

Say this	Not that
When you switch. With select trade-in and Unlimited Plus. Ends 7/26. Buy now	When you switch. With select trade-in and Unlimited Plus. Ends 7/26. Select offer

Customers, Members

- Avoid using “select” as an adjective

Locations, cities, areas, stores

- Use “select” or “limited” based on context and amount of limitations.
- In some scenarios, to avoid inferring that locations were cherry-picked by Verizon, “limited” might be a better choice instead of “select.”
 - Ex. “5G Ultra Wideband is available in limited areas.”

Other use cases

- For present tense verb use of “select” other than CTAs:
 - Use a different word like “choose” or “get” depending on tone. Or, be more contextually specific. For ex: “Gift yourself a little something.”
- Selected (past-tense verb) use:
 - Don’t use unless referring to a button or link action taken.
 - Instead, use a different word like “chose” or “got” depending on tone, or speak to the end benefit e.g. “enrolled” or “upgraded.”

Premium: Current and proposed use

Premium: general use - current

Used in both promotional and utilitarian copy, with different meanings depending on context, but oftentimes not explained

- Generic descriptor
- Highest tier (best/most benefits) products and services
 - For ex. data that isn't slowed based on use (i.e. unlimited high-speed data)
- Product or service name (i.e. proper noun)

Introducing the Orbic Speed 5G UW. With the Orbic Speed 5G UW, you can stay connected to what matters most. The Speed 5G UW is a premium, lightweight, portable hotspot device that connects up to 30 Wi-fi enabled devices at 5G¹ speeds for up to 12 hours² of continuous use.

Promotional: OEM PDP generic descriptor

Unlimited premium data

Included

Unlimited premium data for use on the smartphone.

Utilitarian: MyPlan unlimited data

Unlimited Messaging

Applies when sending and receiving (i) Text, Picture, and Video Messages with Verizon Wireless and non-Verizon Wireless customers in the United States; (ii) Text, Picture, and Video messages sent via email; (iii) Instant Messages; and (iv) Text, Picture, and Video Messages sent to, or received from, other countries while you are in the United States. Premium Messaging programs not included.

Utilitarian proper noun: Premium Messaging programs

Premium: general use - proposed

Explain what “premium” means whenever possible, especially for tiered products and services in utilitarian contexts

- Ideally, instead of using the word “premium,” explain what makes it so.
 - For ex. “Get unlimited high-speed data that isn’t slowed based on how much data you use.”
- If not a top-tier product or service, explain the difference clearly.
 - For ex. “In times of congestion, your smartphone and mobile hotspot data may be temporarily slower than other traffic.”

Premium: general use - proposed cont.

Other scenarios

“Premium” is not:

- Interchangeable with “select.”
- A replacement for specification-based descriptions, for ex. “HD quality”

HD-quality streaming on
5G Nationwide and 4G LTE ⓘ

Bill, statement and related credits: Current and proposed general use

Bill and statement: general use - current

“Bill and “Statement” are synonyms (Merriam-Webster)

- Could cause the terms to be used interchangeably even though they relate to different things, especially in the context of credits.
- Clearer delineation is needed.

Definition of “Bill”

- An itemized account of the cost of goods sold or services performed

Definition of “Statement”

- A summary of activity in an financial account over a particular period of time.

Statement example

Bill and statement: general use - proposed

Differentiated definition of “Bill”

- More all-encompassing vs. a statement. A bill includes a statement, as well as the amount owed and the information or mechanism to pay. It's what customers receive and pay on a monthly basis.

Differentiated definition of “Statement”

- Refers to the summary portion of financial activity over a particular period of time. A statement can include a bill, but doesn't have to.

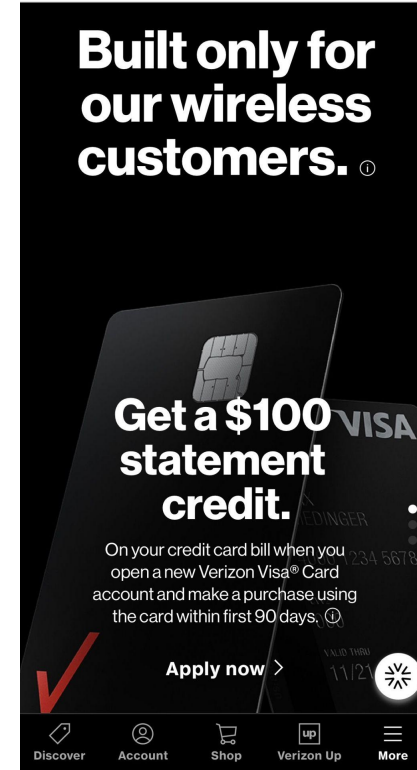

Bill and statement credits: general use - proposed

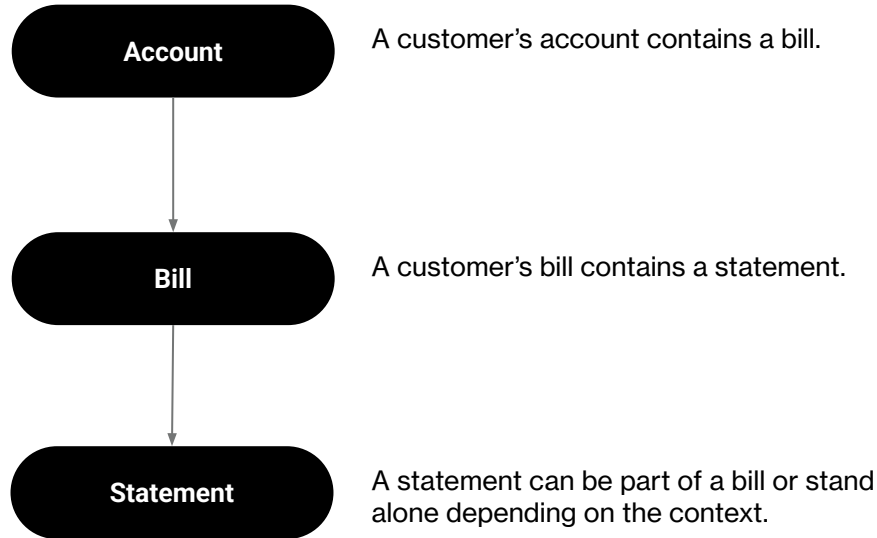

Related nomenclature and when to use

- Bill credit
 - Use in the context of offers that apply a credit to a customer's monthly bill, for ex. a Bill Incentive Credit (BIC), also known as a bill credit. Other types of offers use bill credits well. (Trade-in, etc.)
 - Also known as an “offer credit,” depending on context.
- Statement credit
 - Use in the context of forms of payment, credit card or banking products and any other banking topics
 - For ex. Verizon Visa card
 - Once a bill credit has been applied, it can be more specific to refer to it as a statement credit, as this is where the credit will appear.
